

PROPHECIES that have COME TRUE.

The forecasts of a Seer of the 15th Century bearing on English and American History. Their relation to the Coronation of King George V.

By PROF. B. J. GIGRAND

THE coronation of King George V. of England brings to mind a series of peculiar prophecies contained in an old but little known poem—prophecies, some of which would appear on an investigation to have proved oddly correct in regard to certain events transpiring in American and English history, both prior to and after the Revolution. The name of Merlin is given as the author of the mystic rhymes, which date back to the fifteenth century and run in complete agreement with double meaning, and seeming to be the work of some seer or student of the stars who fore-saw, or fancied he fore-saw, in the heavenly bodies strange portents of the days to come.

The lines can be found in the works of Dean Swift, edition of 1766, page 214, volume 3. They were also printed in the United States in September, 1786, three years after peace with England had been declared, and published in a few foreign journals; but the earliest appearance of the poem was in an ancient English work edited and produced in London in the year 1530. In complete form it runs as follows:

"When the savage is meek and mild
The frantic mother shall stab her child.
When the Cock shall woo the Dove
The Mother shall cease the child to love.
When men like moles work underground
The Lion's Virgin true shall wound.
When the Dove and the Cock the Lion
Shall fight
The Lion shall crouch beneath their might
When the Cock shall guard the Eagle's
nest
The stars shall rise—all in the West.
When ships above the clouds shall sail
The Lion's strength shall surely fail.
When Neptune's back with stripes is red
The sickly Lion shall hide his head.
When seven and six shall make but one
The Lion's might shall be undone."

Many diverse opinions are held as to the ability of mere man to peer into the future, but without entering into an argument on the subject, it is at least interesting to note how curiously certain of the prophecies made by the dead and forgotten rhymist coincide with the march of actual events when submitted to the process of deduction.

We can take the first couplet as referring to the history of America, and more particularly to the colonial period. The white settlers had planted civilization, by means of De Soto's sword, Champlain's guns and the missionaries' prayers; deeply in the forest, and the Indians may be said to have become temporarily subdued through awe of these combined elements. The red men were subjected to meek and mild influences by the tact and religious examples of such men as Roger Williams and William Penn, whose kindness is a part of Indian tradition to this very day. Hence, "when the savage" (evidently the North American Indian) "is meek and mild, the frantic mother" (meaning England) "shall stab her child" (the American colonies).

When and how England enacted this needs scant comment other than that the courts of the colonies, just prior to the Revolution, used the sword of justice to destroy the rights of the American subjects of the crown. At this point England actually, and not figuratively stabbed her children.

"When the Cock shall woo the Dove
The Mother shall cease the child to love."

Now, the cock for ages has been emblematic of France, as the Lion has of England, and the cartoonists of early days invariably designated the French "as proud as the cock." In France, victory at arms or civic triumphs were always, as at the present time, proclaimed by the display of the rooster. The dove referred to was undoubtedly intended for Columbia, or the United States or colonies. The word Columbia means "Dove-like" or "Columbus," the original meaning of Columbia, the noun base of the proper adjective Columbia, but accepted by Americans as a proper noun.

Our colonial history abounds with illustrations as to how eagerly France courted the good will of the American colonies, and an equally emphatic tale in the drama is the jealousy of England at the display of any colonial regard for the French government. This second couplet is especially well illustrated in the continental congress appointing a commission, of which Benjamin Franklin was one, to visit the French at Quebec, and admit of French courtship in the aid of the American Revolution; and how the continental congress in 1776 dispatched him to France, to further admit of the courtly attentions to bring about a wedding of interests; how he procured from the French king 26,000,000 francs, the very money which made further rebellion possible. And at this point England realized, and for the first time, that the uprising in the colonies was indeed a very serious matter, and it provoked the Britishers to learn of our affection for France to a point where "The mother the child did cease to love."

The writer possesses an heraldic sketch designed by Franklin while in Europe, actually indicating England's cruel though motherly treatment of her children, the thirteen colonies, indicating the French concern in the welfare of these struggling dependencies—a remarkable similarity to the lines under consideration. In these heraldic pictures Franklin represents the colonies as of the calm and peaceful animal kingdom, the crane and also the dove. In fact a committee delegated to devise a signature for the United States, reported in 1782 "that the goddess of America (Columbia) have upon her dexter hand perched a dove argent (white)." While the elaborate design was not accepted by the continental congress it indicates that in these days the colonies were often symbolized by a dove. In fact, that peace-loving and mindless your own business was finally accepted in the symbolism of the "olive branch," in the right talon of the adopted eagle—also indicated in the peace tincture of the American shield which according to law is an argent (white or silvery) peace emblem, upon it blazoned six red stripes.

The Lion's Virgin true shall wound."

During the last years of the Revolution the continental congress frequently attempted to make approaches to the camp and redoubts of the British by underground passages. This tunnel method was evidently a French suggestion, as it was a part of early French military tactics. The digging in the earth is also well illustrated in the winter headquarters at Valley Forge, where the felling of trees to establish their log cabins was slow work; and when the cold winter set in many wore the holes in the ground that served as lodges for the freezing troops. The line, "The Lion's Virgin true shall wound," might be taken as a reference to the terrible massacres, expeditions of plunder and destruction in Virginia, named the Virgin colony in honor of Queen Elizabeth. This country of the virgin was indeed wounded, for no other section of the country suffered such bloody military attacks. It was estimated by Jefferson that the raids of Benedict Arnold through Virginia cost the enormous sum of $15,000,000 in property, besides the thousands of lives sacrificed under conditions of the most frightful torture.

"When the Dove and the Cock the Lion
Shall fight"

The Lion shall crouch beneath their
might."

This could be accepted as referring to the united forces of the colonists (the Dove), and the French (the Cock), at the final engagement before Yorktown. This siege and battle resulted in the American victory, and therefore the union of Americana and French resulted in the "Lion" being compelled to "crouch beneath their might."

"When the Cock shall guard the Eagle's
nest.
The stars shall rise—all in the West."

Here we find an allusion to the subsequent history of the three nations—American, French and English. When independence was recognized, the symbol of the United States appeared in the form of a bald eagle. "The bird of freedom and imperial power."

The second test of martial power between American and England came in 1812, and on both sea and land we suffered severe losses, the capitol at Washington being destroyed by the enemy and the city itself falling into possession of the British. But the shield-like attitude of France toward the eagle's nest (the young republic represented by the American eagle) made it possible for the states to attain victory from what the world had almost pronounced defeat. The New England states were never in sympathy with the war, and indeed, an interesting non-national page, bordering on secessionist attitude, falls into the history of the puritan section of our country. The invasion of Canada was a decided failure. Hull's surrender has always been considered unsatisfactory and totally unnecessary; he was court-martialed and sentenced to the shot; but his Revolutionary military record saved his life and he was pardoned. The brave Captain Lawrence on the Chesapeake gave as his dying words the order, "Don't give up the ship," but fate compelled his crew to strike their colors. The Essex, the first American frigate to sail around Cape Horn into the Pacific, found in the battle which ensued the enemy came off victorious. In the midst of these disasters the New Englanders were disregarding by a majority of votes what the national government at Washington decreed. They quietly and secretly published a most unsatisfactory report that was supposed by many to have had its origin in an attempt to break up the federal power. The south and middle west were loyal to the federal edicts. Jackson's marvelous victory at New Orleans, while possibly one of the most pronounced military successes in the history of civilized warfare, was achieved after peace had been declared, and hence cannot be said to have had any bearing on the ending of hostilities. The terms of peace were largely brought about through French influence, as because of the military conditions existing between England and France, the British found it impolitic to follow up the American campaign, although the war was in their favor. Here, then, is an apt illustration of how the French (the Cock) protected the Eagle's nest (America). So much for the first line; the next is especially prophetic:

"The stars shall rise—all in the West."

Immediately after the war of 1812 the stars began to gather in our flag, and they all came from the west, for it should be remembered that in those days any country lying on the sun-down side of the Alleghany mountains was considered west. Hence the opening up of the great western territory with the immediate admission of the new states brought forth the "rise of the stars all in the west," until this day, when the flag has since 1812 seen 30 stars rise in the west.

"When ships above the clouds shall sail
The Lion's strength shall surely fail."

It requires no great stretch of imagination to apply the above lines to the present era when aviators are the heroes of the hour, and long continued flights in airships have ceased to be a novelty. And one might take the "falling of the Lion's strength" to refer to the lessening of the British navy's far famed power when confronted with the possibility of attack by enemies floating in the air. When a certain Frenchman not long ago crossed the channel in an airship and landed safely on British soil, great was the alarm manifested throughout the realm of King George. The event almost caused a panic among those to whom the bugbear of probable invasion by Germany is ever a matter of anxiety.

The last four lines of the Seer's rhymed inditement of coming disaster deserves consideration together:

"When Neptune's back with stripes is red
The sickly Lion shall hide his head.
When seven and six shall make but one
The Lion's might shall be undone."

Possibly these four lines foretell terrible battles on the sea, Neptune being the mythological god of the ocean, and prophesy a naval war in which the waters will be literally ablaze with the red stripes shooting from the cannons' mouths. Or reference may be had to the planet Neptune, instead of the sea god—that heavenly body which of our planetary system is the farthest away from the sun, being 2,745,998,000 miles distant. Within the last few years astronomers have expressed the opinion that Neptune, like Saturn, has red or bright belts about it, and if the telescopes can be made more powerful these "red stripes" will be in view. Is it then that we may expect "The sickly Lion shall hide his head?"

Or it may be that the last two lines refer to the United States; or else indicate the death and numerical designation of King Edward VII. in the first instance seven and six make 13, the generally accepted symbol of the United States represented in the stripes of the flag. "When seven and six shall make but one" might stand for the time when all the territories now under our flag shall all be admitted to statehood, and all these new governments be represented on our national standard.

Or the lines might have direct reference to King Edward's death. The seven and six may well indicate England's "Seventh Edward," or spelling out the two words we have: S I, E 2, V 3, E 4, N 5, F 6, H 7; and E 1, D 2, W 3, A 4, R 5, D 6—showing clearly the seven and six numerals forming one king. Upon his death "The (Eagle's) Lion's might shall be undone."

In connection with the final prediction it is not too much to say that England has not for years been in such an unsettled state politically or called upon to face so many perplexing problems.

Edward, seventh of the name, the Peacemaker, sleeps with his fathers, and George V. mounts the throne of his ancestors, while from all parts of the great empire people gather to do him homage. What of the future? Has the might of England passed away with the life of her peacemaker, or is one prophecy to prove false where so many other predictions made by the mystic student of the stars in the long ago have been fulfilled to the uttermost?

A MARVELOUS RECOVERY.

How a Chronic Invalid Regained Perfect Health.

Mrs. Ray Trusser, 30 West Third St., New Albany, Ind., says: "Kidney disease had rendered me a chronic invalid. I lay in bed unable to move hand or foot. My right limb was swollen to twice normal size. I looked the picture of death and my case puzzled the doctors. The kidney secretions were highly colored and scalded terribly. Marked improvement followed the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. In six weeks I was a well woman. My friends and relatives marvel at my recovery."

Remember the name—Doan's. For sale by druggists and general storekeepers everywhere. Price 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

WISE BROKER.

Jiggs—That marriage broker was to get 10 per cent. of the girl's estate for arranging a match with a French marquis, but he'd better than that—he took it all.

Wiggs—How?

Jiggs—Married the girl himself.

Couldn't See the Resemblance. They have been joking Assistant Treasurer James A. Matthews of the Guardian bank, on his resemblance to President Taft, and Mr. Matthews has steadily refused to be annoyed thereby. So the jokers subsided and the joke died a natural death.

Until the other night, when Mr. and Mrs. Matthews dined together with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harmon and their little daughter, when the Taft resemblance was revived. Turning to young Miss Harmon, Mr. Matthews asked whether she, too, thought he looked like the president.

Dorothy studied long and earnestly. Then she answered: "Not in the face, Uncle Jim"—Cleveland Leader.

The Old Gag.

Miss Lillian B. Rowe, at an advertisement writers' dinner in Denver, said of the harem skirt:

"It will soon be so widely worn that the old gag, perpetrated in the '40s on men, may profitably be revived for women victims."

"Some sharper, you know, will revive the gag by advertising in the Ladies' Own—"

"Send $1 and learn how to keep your harem skirt from becoming fringed at the bottom."

"Thousands of dollars will pour in, and to each victim the sharper will reply:

"Wear kulekars."

The Kaiser Likes the Bible. The Kaiser is a great reader, and while he tries to keep himself abreast of current events, his favorite book is the Bible, says the London Chronicle. A well thumbed and marked copy is always by his bedside. When Mr. Roosevelt visited Berlin last year, the Kaiser made him a present of a number of books. About half of them referred to theology and the others to military subjects. These two classes indicate the Kaiser's own preferences.

WANTED TO SLEEP
Curious That a Tired Preacher Should Have Such Desires.

A minister speaks of the curious effect of Grape-Nuts food on him and how it has relieved him.

"You will doubtless understand how the suffering from indigestion with which I used to be troubled made my work an almost unbearable burden; and why it was that after my Sabbath duties had been performed, sleep was a stranger to my pillow till nearly daylight."

"I had to be very careful as to what I ate, and even with all my care I experienced poignant physical distress after meals, and my food never satisfied me."

"Since I began the use of Grape-Nuts the benefits I have derived from it are very definite. I no longer suffer from indigestion, and I began to improve from the time Grape-Nuts appeared on our table."

"I find that by eating a dish of this food after my Sabbath work is done, (and I always do so now) my nerves are quieted and rest and refreshing sleep are ensured me."

"I feel that I could not possibly do without Grape-Nuts food, now that I know its value. It is invariably on our table—we feel that we need it to make the meal complete and our children will eat Grape-Nuts when they cannot be persuaded to touch anything else."

Got Some Slight Revenge.

An incident worthy of melodrama occurred a few days ago at a London (Eng.) prison. Recently a clever swindler, Alfred Moody, had been imprisoned for a long series of frauds on people whom he engaged as cinematograph operators or water-carriers, and demanded security for their honesty. One of his victims, a man named Bell, finding himself stranded, obtained food for which he could not pay, and was sent to prison the other morning. To his surprise, while there, he came face to face with Moody, and recognized him as the man whom he had entrusted with $50, and who had been the cause of his downfall. For a few minutes the men stared at each other blankly, and then Bell, thoroughly aroused at the thought of his wrongs, took the law into his own hands and administered a severe thrashing to his enemy before the astonished wardens could interfere.

Escaped Death Thirteen Times.

John H. Rice of North Hempstead, L. I., on his thirteenth escape from death, the last time in an auto accident, remarked that he was a lucky man. Here are some of the things that have happened to him: Left leg cut off by train, shot out eye cleaning a revolver, lost an arm by fall from a tree, was saved three times from drowning.

Some Rare Designs.

The demand among the wealthy American women for rare and costly china is keeping the great china factories of the world working overtime. The greater part of the china manufactured, it is reported, is shipped to this country. Society women seeking to have something new and original now have hit on having plates of rare design for every course.

"This fashion," said an importer, "has been set by women who can afford to pay $10,000 to $20,000 a set for rare china. Those women wish rare and different designs and they are willing to pay for them on condition that no similar designs are sold in this country. Service, fish, game and entree plates now are being included among the table china in the best stores. Even at that women come to us constantly seeking new pieces and offering to pay large amounts to get something new for the table."

covered with great bushes and trees, a narrow defile that is almost an unbroken arch for about half a mile.

The verdure of the woods emanated a heavy fragrance, refreshing and revitalizing after a year of mill smoke and Cass street dust.

It was eight o'clock in the evening when we entered the hotel, and Ed. Edman, the proprietor, met us with a heavy arm and cordial handshake.

He explained that the season had not opened but that he could accommodate us he hoped with satisfaction. Then he introduced us to a small and later to the fire-flies which he brought the summer for the entertainment of his guests.

While he operates a gas plant of his own for the building, the guests generally depend on the fire-flies outdoors.

These creatures danced in ecstasy as for a great homecoming festival. They hopped (if that is what they do) from tree to tree and bush to bush and swayed over the water in tremulous and descendent movements.

All this reminds me of the Indians who in the darkness were bitten by mosquitoes (not at Channel Lake) and noticed the tiny flashes of light about him exclaimed:

"By gosh, the mosquitoes are so many they look like fire with lanterns."

That night I met the only other boarder present besides the family man and myself.

That night I learned the mysteries of Pin and (sh-sh-sh) P-o-k-e-n. But that is another story.

Sylvan Besch is on the northern shore of Channel Lake. It is one of the only three hotels on the lake. Practically all the remaining part of the shore land is occupied by private cottages and few club houses. Only the Bluffs, on the west shore, perhaps the most desirable part of the whole lake, because of its highland, its trees, its eastern frontage and its excellent beach have escaped the summer cottager and the hotel man.

The acreage there is being platted however, and will shortly be sold to desirable purchasers. I went over the subdivision and was pleased with it.

FACES ARE ALTERED BY FOOD

Specialists Say That the Contours Are Changed From Plain to Pretty, or Vice Versa.

You can, according to the opinion of an American expert, alter your children's features by varying their food.

If your little daughter, for instance, has too heavy a face, too massive a chin, and you are afraid that she will grow up unprepossessing, cease to give her foods with starch in them, and she will become dainty and graceful.

Should she, on the other hand, be too slender of feature, with a tiny chin, you can develop rounded curves by giving her more starch than she has been having.

"Man is what he eats," says this expert, and he then mentions such divergencies from the normal facial type as "starch chin," "union chin," "tea drinker's teeth," "full-lipped sugar mouth" and "potato lip." These divergencies, he says, are caused by the articles of diet named.

"The food eaten makes an enormous difference in people's appearance," a New York beauty doctor who has had several years' hospital experience, said, "and though it cannot alter the framework of the adult face it can that of young children while their bones are still growing."

"The child who has too much starch develops puffy flesh all over the face, which then appears too massive."

"Such a child should be given more nitrogenous food, such as meat and green vegetables containing the proper mineral salts for building up strong, well-shaped bones, and much less starchy food, such as rice, potatoes or white bread."

"Such vegetables are spinach, spring cabbage, turnip tops, celery or carrots. By their action better muscular tissues are built up over stronger bones, and the result is alert, dainty features."

"If, however, the face is too thin, more starch should be given, as well as proteids and the vegetables I have named, and then the rounded contour so necessary to beauty will be built up."

How German Girls Learn.

How would an up-to-date American girl like the following hint from a German critic now in this country? "Why do not struggling country persons with small salaries help themselves out by taking charge of city young women? In Germany it is the custom for a girl to pass a year between school and society in the country in the home of some clergyman who can oversee her reading, while his wife instructs her into all the mystery of the housewifely arts. The plan has many advantages. It is more practical than your course to domestic science, for the pupil actually takes a hand in all the work of the household from the laundering to sausage making."

Free from the distractions of home or society, or even of the classroom, she can devote herself single minded to the business in hand. Her first timid experiments are ventured out of range of the jeers of brothers and sisters and of the mother's unconscious assumption that she is still a little girl. When she goes home it is in the full blush and dignity of housewifely completeness, a graduate into mature life.

Puzzle for German Police.

A curious obstacle has intervened to prevent the decapitation of a man who was recently sentenced to death at Posen, Germany, for murder. The condemned man called himself Jacob Kinzie, and had the usual papers of identification made out in this name. Under it he had served several terms of imprisonment for theft, and no one doubted that it was his own name until after he had been adjudged to lose his head. It then came to the knowledge of the police that the real Jacob Kinzie is at present farming in South Africa, where he is highly respected; and that his papers were stolen from him some years ago. Under German law, however, nobody can be executed until his identity has been properly established, and the authorities are completely at a loss as to the real name and parentage of their doomed captive. He, not unnaturally, steadily declines to provide them with the information that will enable them to proceed with the operation of cutting off his head.

Hume and the Saints.

David Hume's residence in the New Town of Edinburgh was the first building in a new street and a witty young lady chalked up on the walls "St. David street," alluding to the owner. Hume's servant girl resented such a reference to her master and hurried into the house to inform how he had been made game of. "Never mind, lassie," said Hume, "many a waur man has been made a saint before."

The authorities adopted the young lady's suggestion for the thoroughfare is so named to this day. There is another version of the philosopher's reply to his housekeeper as we have heard it: "Never mind, many a better man has been made a saint before me."

The Easiest Way.

"They tell me that Burns eloped with an old flame."
"Yes, that's what he did."
"Well, that surely is a hot one! How did he do it?"
"The natural way—down the fire escape."—Judge.

"Elevating" the Stage.

A man who has for a long time been a criminal has been paroled so that he may play the part of a crook in a drama of the underworld. If the stage can be "elevated" in this way let the elevating proceed; but the other members of the company ought to be warned against leaving valuables in their dressing-rooms.

Old Beliefs Rudely Disturbed.

The old teachings of China and India established the belief in Japan that it was best that women be not noticed by others, that their duties were wholly domestic, and that appearing out of doors was unbecoming a faithful wife or dutiful daughter. Garden parties, dinner parties, balls and social calls are new importations from the west.

Coroner J. L. Taylor of Lake county and a coroners' jury have now finished the inquest into the causes of the collision of a Seol line freight train and an ice train near Doolittle's, crossing just out of Grayslake, three weeks ago.

The verdicts were that James Carey and Fred Miller, respectively the conductor and the engineer of the ice train had met their death in the collision and that the collision was due to the gross negligence of the company. The train dispatcher whom the company discharged when suspicion was turned in his direction, as it became known that four orders were tangled up, had disappeared and this complicated the task of the jury and delayed its finding.

WHAT HIS EDUCATION COST

Jones Has Tried Various Things, Including Matrimony, and Has Not Yet Done Paying.

"How much did it cost you to get your education?" asked Jones.

"Well," said Smith, "let's see. My primary education was cheap—say, $500. My secondary training was about twice as much, while my college course amounted to something like a thousand a year, or four thousand in all. Then I had three years at a technical school, at about the same rate—so, all in all, my education came to about $5,500, or $9,000 at the outside. What do you figure yours cost?"

"Well," replied Jones, reflectively, "I guess mine was rather more expensive. I went through college, but I didn't have any technical training. Up to that point we are about equal. Then I went west and got interested in a gold mine. That bit of knowledge cost considerable. Next, I tried stock-raising, and found that a pretty expensive school. Before I was finally graduated from that I took a hand at the theatrical business, and learned a lot at fairly high rates. There was a little girl in the company, though, seemed to think I hadn't got all the knowledge that was coming to me, so she put me in the matrimonial school. Not having graduated from that yet, I can't give any final figures, but I can tell you this: the higher up you get the more it costs. After a while the kids came along, and they taught me a whole heap, but the bills were high. For twenty years or so I worried along on this kind of schooling, and then my eldest girl got married. Her husband thought he'd like to try farming, and I learned a lot about that in the next few years, at the cost of about $5,000 a year. Then pretty soon they had a couple of kids, and what my own children ain't taught me they did. The fact is—hey, there! where are you going? I've only just begun to tell you about my education."

But already Smith was far down the street, with his fingers in his ears, feeling as though from the wrath to come.—Success Magazine.

Jean of Arc's Sword. A sword in the Dijon museum has just been identified as that used by Jean of Arc and presented to her by Charles VII. of France. On one side of the hilt is engraved a figure kneeling before a cross and the inscription "Charles VII." while the other side bears the name "Vaucouleurs." The sword also bears the arms of France and of the town of Orleans and the date 1419.

New York's indebtedness. New Yorkers are the biggest borrowers in the world; at least they are so collectively, for the city owes seven times as much as any other city in the country and more than one-half as much as the largest twenty-seven other cities in the land.

Effect of Imagination.
A man condemned to death was promised that if he would spend the night in bed in which a cholera patient had died and survived the experiment, his freedom would be given him. He spent the night in the bed and died the next day. But no patient had died in the bed, and the effect on the imagination and nerves of the condemned man really caused his death.

Flattery Catches Audiences.
If you compliment an individual man to his face, he'll pretend he doesn't like it. But tell an audience that it is with unspeakable pleasure that you appear before such an intelligent body of men, and you will be applauded to the echo.

One of Sir Evelyn Wood's Stories.

Some forty years ago at Aldershot the camp was commanded by Sir James York Scarlett, a Crimean veteran. On the occasion in question he was directing some sham fighting. In a manner then usual he was leading a line of skirmishers of one force against another, many yards in front, as in earlier times he had led the Heavy Brigade at Balaklava against three times its numbers. To a soldier of the younger school it seemed a preposterous proceeding, and Sir Evelyn ventured to criticize it.

Sir James replied: "Young man, have I not ordered you twice to hold your tongue? If I like to lead my skirmishers, what the hell is that to you?" Sir Evelyn replied: "Ten thousand pardons, sir, but it is the enemy's line in retreat you have been leading for the last ten minutes." He was short-sighted and did not wear glasses, so was unable to see the distinguishing mark, a sprig of henthier worn in the shakos of the troops he was attacking.—Westminster Gazette.

The Legion of Honor.

After the vote for adding a second ten years to the duration of Bonaparte's consulship he created, May 19, the order of the Legion of Honor. This institution was seen followed by that of the new nobility. Thus, in a short space of time, the Concordat to tranquillize consciences and re-establish harmony in the church, the decree to recall the émigrés, the continuance of the consular power for ten years, by way of preparation for the consulship for life, and the possession of the empire, and the creation, in a country which had abolished all distinctions, of an order which was to engender prodigies, following closely on the heels of each other. The Bourbons, in reviving the abolished orders, were wise enough to preserve along with them the Legion of Honor.—Memoirs of Napoleon Bonaparte-Burriec.

Something of a Hit.

"An headed knee I begged for a kiss."

"And what did she say?"

"Told me to get up and be practical."—Kansas City Journal.

Pen Mar.

Some fellow down Lancaster way has come out with the explanation as to how Pen Mar got its name. "It is a Cornish extraction," says the Lancaster man, and he quotes an ancient rhyme to prove it. The fact is that Pen Mar is so called because it is on the Mason Dixon line, with Pennsylvania on one side and Maryland on the other, the first three letters of each state name being used to form the word.—Philadelphia North American.

Fighting Man.

It is man's nature to fight. It is his merit to fight for what he believes to be right. Courage and bravery are not achieved by hiring a lawyer. A man who is not willing to fight to the death for the right or for his own is not as good or complete a man as one who is willing. But opinions about this are not so important as the fact that it is man's nature to fight, and that neither resolutions nor legislation nor provision to get over all kinds of trouble in any other way than by fighting will avail.—Elwood Hendrick in the Atlantic.

Reasonably Safe.

The man who is true to himself is not likely to be injured much by those who would deal falsely with him.

Law and Reason.

Let us consider the reason of the case. For nothing is law that is not reason.—Sir John Powell.

Two Sets of Muscles.

You have two sets of muscles, the outer ones, which you can feel and the inner ones, which are your lungs, heart, stomach and other internal organs. The outer ones are conveniences for performing actions. The inner ones are your life—the fate which makes you happy or depressed, powerful or weak, useful or the contrary. These inner muscles require training. Just like any other muscles, by intelligently directed exercise.—National Magazine.

Easy Enough.

Barry is literary rather than mathematical in his tastes. His teacher was trying to initiate him into the mysteries of division. During the struggle she said in despair: "Don't you even know how many times three goes into twelve?" "Aw, that's easy," said the eight-year-old in disgust, "three, times and three over."—Woman's Home Companion.

Runabout

A speedy, smart, clean-cut little aristocrat with the lines of the costliest protected touring types.

Price, $750 F. O. B. Detroit

To you who have sought the utmost in a small four-passenger motor car at a reasonable price, let this car fulfill your desires. We present, at last, the car of values which none can surpass at the same or near the price at which this is offered. This excellent product should be received with such enthusiasm as was the runabout two years ago. Careful examination will bring to light the completeness of the car's details and also its sturdy construction. The heart of this attractive car is none other than the famous 20 h. p. Hupmobile unit power plant with the ability to negotiate steep grades "on high." The chassis is a lengthened edition of that of the runabout with a frame increased in strength to meet the new demands placed upon it. Value is so apparent in this car at $900 that it should not even need the help of this adv. to sell every car we could make. We want you to become acquainted with our representative. Waste no time, secure a satisfying demonstration at the earliest date possible. There has been nothing quite so good since the debut of our first runabout. One of the features of the car is its easy riding qualities and ample leg room is provided for the tallest person. The car is not what could be termed "high powered" for with an excess of power the running expense would increase. It has ample power and can be operated at small expense.
